TRIBUTE TO AN OLD SERVANT.

Mrs. Jefferson Davis, in a letter to a friend in Baltimore, pays a touching tribute to Frederick McGinnis, who died from injuries sustained on the Western Maryland Railroad on October 11. Frederick was Mr. Davis's faithful servant and friend during his imprisonment at Fortress Monroe. Mrs. Davis writes:

"He was an honor to his race. A man of sterling integrity, high intelligence, keen sense of justice, a warm and grateful heart, he had the fine instincts of a gentleman. Whatever he undertook he performed faithfully and well, for his mental faculties were not inferior to his moral qualities."

"He was born a slave and brought up by his mistress with affectionate care, which he repaid with a devotion uncommon with men of any race. After the war had impoverished her and she was too old to support herself, he took a place elsewhere in order to maintain her. Then, he had a wife and child, every month he sent his old mistress a part, and sometimes the whole, of his wages. He once told the writer that he had to find out through friends in Charleston what she needed, as she was reluctant to accept anything from him."

"While Frederick was in the service of Mr. George Schley, his hospitable home in Georgia was opened to Mrs. Jefferson Davis while she was detained by the federal authorities and limited to the State of Georgia. Frederick was much moved by her sorrows and offered to serve her gratuitously until the end of Mr. Davis's imprisonment. For obvious reasons this could not be accepted, but after he had left Mr. Schley's house and she had received permission to live at Fortress Monroe, he joined her and remained with the family three years. Every attention that reverence and affection could offer Frederick rendered in the most intelligent, delicate and sensible manner."

"Appreciating how necessary he had become to the prisoner of State, Mrs. Davis offered him a considerable increase of his wages which were already somewhat larger than those of other men in his capacity. 'You surely do not think I would take more money from you,' I would have served you for nothing if you had let me do so."

"About this time there were many gross and petty insults offered to Mr. Davis and his family by visitors who were impelled by hate and curiosity. His services were invaluable, for he seemed to know by instinct when these persons were about to intrude, and met and repelled them with the manner of a well-bred gentleman. Thus he shielded the family from insults which would have otherwise rendered life intolerable to them, without subjecting himself to the reproaches of the officer in command. 'One evidence of his refinement of feeling is worth repeating. 'He had fallen in love with Mrs. Davis's faithful maid after the death of his first wife, and was to be married to Carroll by Rev. Mr. Barton, of Norfolk. Several of the officers, among whom was the kind and gentlemanly Gen. Henry Burton, commander of Fortress Monroe, desired to be present as an expression of their regard and respect for the groom, but when he was told of the complaint they desired to pay him he declined with respectful thanks, saying that he thought Mr. Davis required quiet, and though he felt grateful for their interest in the ceremony must be entirely private. To the writer he said: 'I cannot invite the men who are keeping Mr. Davis a prisoner to be my guests.' When some friendly young officers offered him five dollars to make one of their little suppers he made the salad, but declined the money. 'I am Mr. Davis's servant,' said he, 'and am fully paid by him.' 'The family kept no account of the money entrusted to his care, but at the end of each month his books were correct to a cent, and the only time he became fretful was when one of the family refused to look over his items of his accounts. After Mr. Davis was liberated he felt that his broken fortunes did not justify his keeping servants for purely personal needs, and a year afterward he very reluctantly looked out for a place for the friend from whom necessity forced him to part. Frederick offered to remain with him for a small sum, but he was all too generously refused, and the present president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, Mr. John W. Garrett, took him into his service. He remained there for several years. 'After he left Mr. Garrett, for whom he always entertained a sincere respect and regard, he obtained a remunerative employment and set about educating his son and his wife's daughter. His hopes were high for his boy, but when death claimed him the broken-hearted father wrote to Mrs. Davis, 'I have no one now to bear my honest name; my boy promised to be a credit to me, but God's will be done.' 'Some years before his death Mr. Davis repeated his offer to give Frederick a large tract of land, and added a request that he would come and make his home with him in the South, but he answered that his boy was now entering upon a life of usefulness, and he feared to unsettle or leave him alone, exposed to temptations, unprotected by his father. 'My wish to live with you has never changed,' wrote this faithful friend, 'but my duties keep me here, where I have many kind friends. My wife is dead and my boy is all I have left.' 'So this humble Christian pursued the even tenor of his way, asking nothing of any man except what he earned, and after a life spent in honorable endeavor, which was crowned with substantial, if humble, success, he went to his rest crushed out of life by an accident, and so far as man may deliver a verdict, he has entered into the joy of his Lord. He has left no more sincere mourners than those who knew him best—Mrs. Jefferson Davis and her children.' V. J. D.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. G. Gardner, of Diamond, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: 'I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at River Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succumbing to La Grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results.' Trial bottles free at E. L. Allen's Drug Store. Regular size 50c. and $1.

Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but kept getting worse. I sent him the same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful medicine.—Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by L. Stabler & Co., Druggists.

If your child is puny, fretful, troubled with glandular swellings, inflamed eyes, or sores on the head, face, or body, a course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla is needed to expel the scrofulous humors from the blood. The sooner you begin to give this medicine the better.

ARNOLD'S BROMO-CELESTY. Try this unrivaled remedy for Headaches, Neuralgia, Sleeplessness, 10 cents.

For Over Fifty Years
